

JUICY Literacy BINGO!

Brought to you by author April Jones Prince

Hello, fellow readers and writers! If you know me or my author visits, you know that I'm a big fan of stories, both true and imagined, that draw upon juicy ideas, juicy information, and juicy words. Juicy = robust, flavorful, and exciting! I challenge YOU to do some juicy reading and writing of your own. Can you score a bingo? Can you complete the whole page? 🍷

Read under your covers or in a fort	Write a postcard, letter, or text message	Write on the sidewalk or driveway with chalk	Read a friend or sibling's favorite book	Read in the bathroom!
Read a comic or graphic novel	Write a biography of your pet (real or imagined)	Read flopped on your belly	Write in a journal with a colored pen or pencil	Read and follow a recipe
Write a fabulous first line of a story	Read with a flashlight or book light		Read a favorite picture book	Write a thank-you note to a community member
Read three jokes, then try writing one!	Write an ad for your favorite toy or game	Read in a tree or sitting on the grass (or snow!)	Write a limerick or other type of poem	Read a magazine article
Read to an animal (real or not!)	Read about science or history	Write a review of the last movie you saw	Read to a family member	Write down three of your favorite juicy words
