

Juicy Mad Lib: How to Write a Juicy Story

Can you complete the story on the next page by supplying JUICY words from your creative mind or those of friends and family?

(Of course you can! YOU are a Writer!)

To complete the story, you'll need certain types of words. They are:

Noun	a person, place, or thing: nurse, beach, sparkler
Verb	an action word: rush, splash, celebrate
Adjective	a word that describes a noun: spectacular, refreshing, bright
Exclamation	a sudden remark, especially in surprise: Ouch! Wow! Yikes!

To finish the story yourself, list your words below. (It's better if you come up with the words without looking at the story!) OR, use this Google form to send me your words and I will send you your story!

Adjective _____

Adjective _____

Place _____

Noun _____

Place _____

Adjective _____

Noun _____

Verb _____

Noun _____

Verb _____

Verb _____

Verb _____

Noun _____

Noun _____

Verb _____

Noun _____

Noun _____

Noun _____

Adjective _____

Exclamation _____

Juicy Mad Lib: How to Write a Juicy Story

If you want to write a juicy story, there are several _____ ingredients you'll want to include. One is a setting—that's where your story takes place. It could be (a) _____ or (a) _____.
(adjective)

(place) (place)

You also need a main character, like a _____ or a _____.
(noun) (noun)

That character should have a problem or a goal. Maybe they want to
_____, a _____ or _____ a _____.
(verb) (noun) (verb) (noun)

But something _____ is in their way, like a _____!
(adjective) (noun)

The beginning of the story will introduce your _____ readers to your setting and character and kick off the character's goal. The middle of the story is where your character takes action. They might _____, _____, or _____ toward their (verb) (verb) (verb)
(adjective)

goal. Be sure to include sensory detail, like what they hear with their _____ and see with their _____. Finally, the end of (noun) (noun)

the story wraps everything up in a tidy _____. _____!
(noun) (exclamation)

You did it! You are a _____, juicy writer if there ever was one.
(adjective)